

Dear FCC,

I am absolutely opposed to any liberalization of the do-not-call rules. In fact, I am for strengthening them. My home is my little sanctuary from the world. I cannot express strongly enough how opposed I am to uninvited phone calls. This includes charities, surveys, etc. I do not and never will do any business over the phone with someone who has randomly called me. They can email me (I can always and very easily stop annoying spam) or they can send me snail mail (I can and do shred unwanted messages, which is 99% of them), if someone wants to contact me or sell me something.

This is my little domain and I do not want unwanted intrusions by phone. Please inform any politician that if he/she endorses liberalization of the current do-not-call rules, tell them to be prepared for an onslaught of complaints.

Do-not-call rules in Wisconsin are "tougher" than federal laws. Do not weaken our state laws with a federalist attitude that "you know better" than us. We like it this way in Wisconsin and we are going to keep it this way.

Can I say this any clearer, do not weaken the do-not-call rules. If anything, strengthen them.

Yours truly,

Dan Allan
